A Message from the LCC President

MARGARET HAMILTON

Lane Community College was built on partnerships and collaboration within our community. As Lane's President, I have had the privilege to take these partnerships to a new level. Lane students need their education to be seamless through the existence of partnerships that simplify transfer to four-year universities, increase employment opportunities, and offer clear pathways to their goals.

To that end, we have sharpened our focus on the transfer experience by forging formal agreements that promote articulation, transfer and student success. In late fall, we worked closely with Oregon State University to create a pathway for students to earn a bachelor's degree in business in three years. We also signed an agreement with Northwest Christian University to enable Lane students to seamlessly transfer as juniors after completing two years at Lane. This agreement complements the existing relationship between the two schools that permits our nursing students to obtain a BSN degree at NCU without leaving the local area. Lane's nursing students also benefit from having the Oregon Consortium for Nursing Education co-located on our main campus, providing them with a guaranteed local pathway to obtain a BSN degree from OHSU. Strengthening our partnerships is just the beginning. We are working closely with the University of Oregon, Pacific University, and other Oregon colleges to provide additional pathways for seamless transfer.

Seamless transitions are not limited to our university partners. We recognize the need for a continuum of success from high school through employment. Programs such as College Now, which enables students to receive college credit from Lane while still in high school, career/technical classes offered to high school students on our campus, or our admission team's close collaboration with high school counselors and families are examples of our dedication to creating a clear pathway for high school students.

As students look toward future employment, we rely on our industry partnerships developed through faculty-industry connections, cooperative work experiences, and internships to ensure that we are offering the education our students need to step directly into the workplace. All of our career/technical majors have an affiliated industry advisory committee that is critical to the major. I encourage you to engage and share your own expertise through one of these advisory groups.

Of course, one of the most important partnerships Lane has is with you as a donor and supporter of our work. Whether you donate funding for a scholarship, gift scrap metal for our manufacturing students to use in class, volunteer at our events, or provide your industry expertise, you are having a profound effect on our campus and students. The impact of your gifts is immediate and transformative. Your partnership makes our students' career pathways tangible and achievable, and your support lets them know that they are not walking those paths alone.

A Message from the Foundation Director

WENDY JETT

In the following pages, we highlight our dental hygiene and assisting programs in depth through the stories of a current student, a successful alum, and a faculty member and leader who has dedicated her long career to student success in the dental professions. Our dental program alumni often stay in the local area after graduation, and you will find them in dental offices throughout Lane County. Whenever we speak with current students or alumni of these programs, they overwhelmingly comment that they feel their work enables them to give back to the community, and that their career has a direct impact on community health and well-being. It's no wonder that many are involved in mentoring the next generation of professionals, many are scholarship donors, and many are delighted to share their stories of success.

Of course, our dental programs are not the only disciplines showcased in this report. You will see stories of a veteran returning to school to start a new career, a corporation dedicated to the education and development of its future workforce, and highlights of donors who have been honored for their lifetime commitments to the College and community. And throughout the following pages, you will see faces – faces of those who give, grow, and succeed. Faces of those who change lives and faces of those forever changed by your generosity. Thank you for your support of Lane Community College.

Wendy with endowment donor, Jane King at the 2018 President's Circle Reception.

WELCOMING KATIE GATLIN!

We are delighted to announce that Katie Gatlin has joined the LCC Foundation staff as our new Annual Gifts Officer, succeeding Phillip Hudspeth. Katie is the former Director of Development and Communications for CASA-Lane County and she holds her master's degree in Public Policy, Planning and Management from the University of Oregon. She brings experience, knowledge, creativity and enthusiasm to her new role – her extraordinarily positive personality and work in fundraising and events will make her a strong asset on our team. She is looking forward to meeting and working with you in the coming months, so please give her a warm welcome!

Committed to Success

SARAH TALBOT
LCC ALUMNA

Sarah Talbot began taking summer classes at Lane Community College even before she graduated from Willamette High School. However, due to limited finances, attending college after high school did not seem to be in the cards. When Sarah received the LCC Foundation's Gilma Greenhoot Scholarship, higher education became a real possibility. "I would not have explored LCC or education as openly. I tend to be conservative when it comes to finances. I want to make sure the financial decisions I make are wise and responsible. Having an LCC Foundation scholarship gave me the means to explore career options." says Sarah.

As a young mother, Sarah found school to be very stressful, but College staff mentored her during her "rocky season of life." She says that Dental Assisting program faculty, Leslie Greer and Dona Smalley, took a genuine interest in her. "They were supporting and helped guide me... I could tell that they were committed to partner with people who wanted to succeed." After her graduation in 2006, Sarah was immediately employed by a dental practice where she had interned as a student. After this job, she found her "forever home" with the orthodontic practice of Dr. Benjamin Thornton where she is now the office manager.

Sarah has never forgotten her LCC roots, and she uses her current position to give back and cultivate the next generation of dental assistants. She partners with the Dental Assisting program to conduct mock interviews for current students. This work not only gives students the opportunity to prepare for employer interviews, but it gives Sarah the opportunity to be familiar with the talent in the area. She keeps student resumés on hand and when a job opens, she has contacts she knows are capable and trained.

Sarah's scholarships and training at LCC have allowed her to have a successful career that supports her family but also to graduate without significant debt. "We've never had debt beyond our car payments and mortgage. We have had the opportunity to contribute to a 401k, as well as save for our daughter." Today, Sarah and her husband can support local businesses and donate to charities, as well as provide for their daughter's future. When asked about her daughter's education, Sarah says, "I would love to see her at Lane."

"I tend to be conservative when it comes to finances. I want to make sure the financial decisions I make are wise and responsible. Having an LCC Foundation scholarship gave me the means to explore career options."

Partners for a Skilled Workforce

JOHNSON CRUSHERS INTERNATIONAL CORPORATE PHILANTHROPY

Johnson Crushers International (JCI), formerly known as ElJay Manufacturing, has been a steady part of Eugene's industrial community since 1947. Re-formed as JCI in 1995, the company is a leader in their industry—manufacturing and supplying aggregate machinery to customers in mining, quarrying, and other similar industries around the world. JCI is a major employer in our community with a team of nearly 300, including over 150 employees working in welding, machining, and field service technology. Because of the need for a skilled local workforce, forming a partnership with Lane Community College was an obvious choice. Since 1996, JCI has funded an annual LCC Foundation scholarship, investing in the success of students and growing our community's future workforce. Over the years, the company has supplied Lane with hundreds of thousands of pounds of scrap metal and other materials needed for training and coursework in Lane's industrial programs.

Both JCI and Lane believe wholeheartedly in sustainably developing tomorrow's workforce, and the long-standing relationship between the two organizations displays shared goals. Avril Watt, JCI's Human Resources Manager, says "The best way for us to get skilled workers is through a combination of quality classroom technical training and on the job experience at a place like JCI."

JCI's scholarship has supported over 45 students in Lane's Diesel Technology, Fabrication and Welding Technology, and Manufacturing Technology programs over the past two decades, showing the company's true commitment to cultivating the local workforce. "There's a skilled work shortage in the Eugene-Springfield area... if we can help someone get the skill set they need, support them through school, or allow them to take a class they never could have afforded on their own—well, that's the essence of what a scholarship should be," Avril says.

Apart from providing scholarships and materials to Lane, JCI is committed to furthering Career Technical Education in Lane County. JCI employees serve on education committees in the area and promote the area's public school CTE programs, all with the goal of inspiring the next generation of students in the trades. JCI has also established a job-shadow program that allows high school students interested in the career field to experience what it's like to work in a thriving industrial environment. When students are inspired by their job-shadow, they are encouraged to take classes at Lane and develop the skills required to come back and work for JCI. Avril says, "We see it as a very valuable relationship... as a way of making connections with our future workforce and promoting the trade in general." Through its partnership with Lane, JCI is taking the lead in ensuring that skilled trades people are developed and employed locally.

Partners in Public Health

SHARON HAGAN
LCC FACULTY

Sharon Hagan has been teaching and inspiring Dental Hygiene students at Lane Community College for more than forty years. As the program coordinator, Sharon's passion for public health is evident in her teaching, her advocacy for the profession, and the extensive professional partnerships she has built over decades. Initially inspired by her uncle who was a dentist, she earned a bachelor's in dental hygiene from Idaho State University and a master's degree in community health from Western Kentucky University.

Early in her career, she saw firsthand how the lack of dental care, especially in rural communities, has become a critical public health issue. Recognizing that issue, Sharon has helped to integrate public service into the curriculum of the program. "I've always championed our students' experiences that were beyond just the clinical. By working with people who are different from themselves, they develop cultural competency. The College has a clinic for low-income people, and our doors are open for them. We try hard to provide care to those individuals who need care. A lot of people can't enter dental offices because they don't have the funds."

Each year, Lane's Dental Hygiene students conduct dental screenings and cleanings in Eugene, but also in Oakridge, Cottage Grove and other rural areas of Lane County. Collaborating with school districts, many children are brought into the LCC Dental Clinic for restorative care. "We try to meet the needs of our communities, but also the needs of our students. We want our students to see that there are low-income students and residents with high dental needs that are not being met," Sharon says.

Enrollment in the Dental Hygiene program is quite competitive. Annually, 60-75 students will apply for 20 available seats—and those who are accepted face the reality of paying for their education. With an incredibly low faculty-student ratio required for clinical work, the cost of the program over two years exceeds $35,000. Scholarships are critical to enable students to afford their tuition, equipment and instruments, and to avoid debt that might deter them from finishing the program. "With scholarships, students concentrate more on their education and less on survival," Sharon explains. This academic year, 13 students in Lane's dental programs received LCC Foundation Scholarships.

"We try to meet the needs of our communities, but also the needs of our students. We want our students to see that there are low-income students and residents with high dental needs that are not being met."

Serving Country and Community

SEAN MILLER
STUDENT & U.S. VETERAN

Sean Miller, a father of three children and Army Veteran, took a non-traditional educational pathway. In the early 2000s, Sean was inspired to serve his country and joined the Army after getting his GED. Sean served in active duty from 2007 to 2015 as a combat engineer for the 82nd Airborne Division in both Iraq and Afghanistan. In this role, Sean's primary duty was to clear roads of any and all hazards to ensure safe passage along them. "My experience in the Army was amazing. The adventures that we got to go on, and the sacrifices that we had to make actually brought us closer together."

Sean fully intended to make serving in the Army a lifelong career but was forced out of active duty by an unfortunate injury sustained during a routine jump. Sean, who describes himself as exceptionally tenacious, didn't let this stop him from serving his country. Soon after leaving the Army, he was able to find a job serving overseas as a Senior Training and Development Subject. His work as a subject matter expert allowed him to instruct trainees and share the knowledge and skillset he gained in active duty.

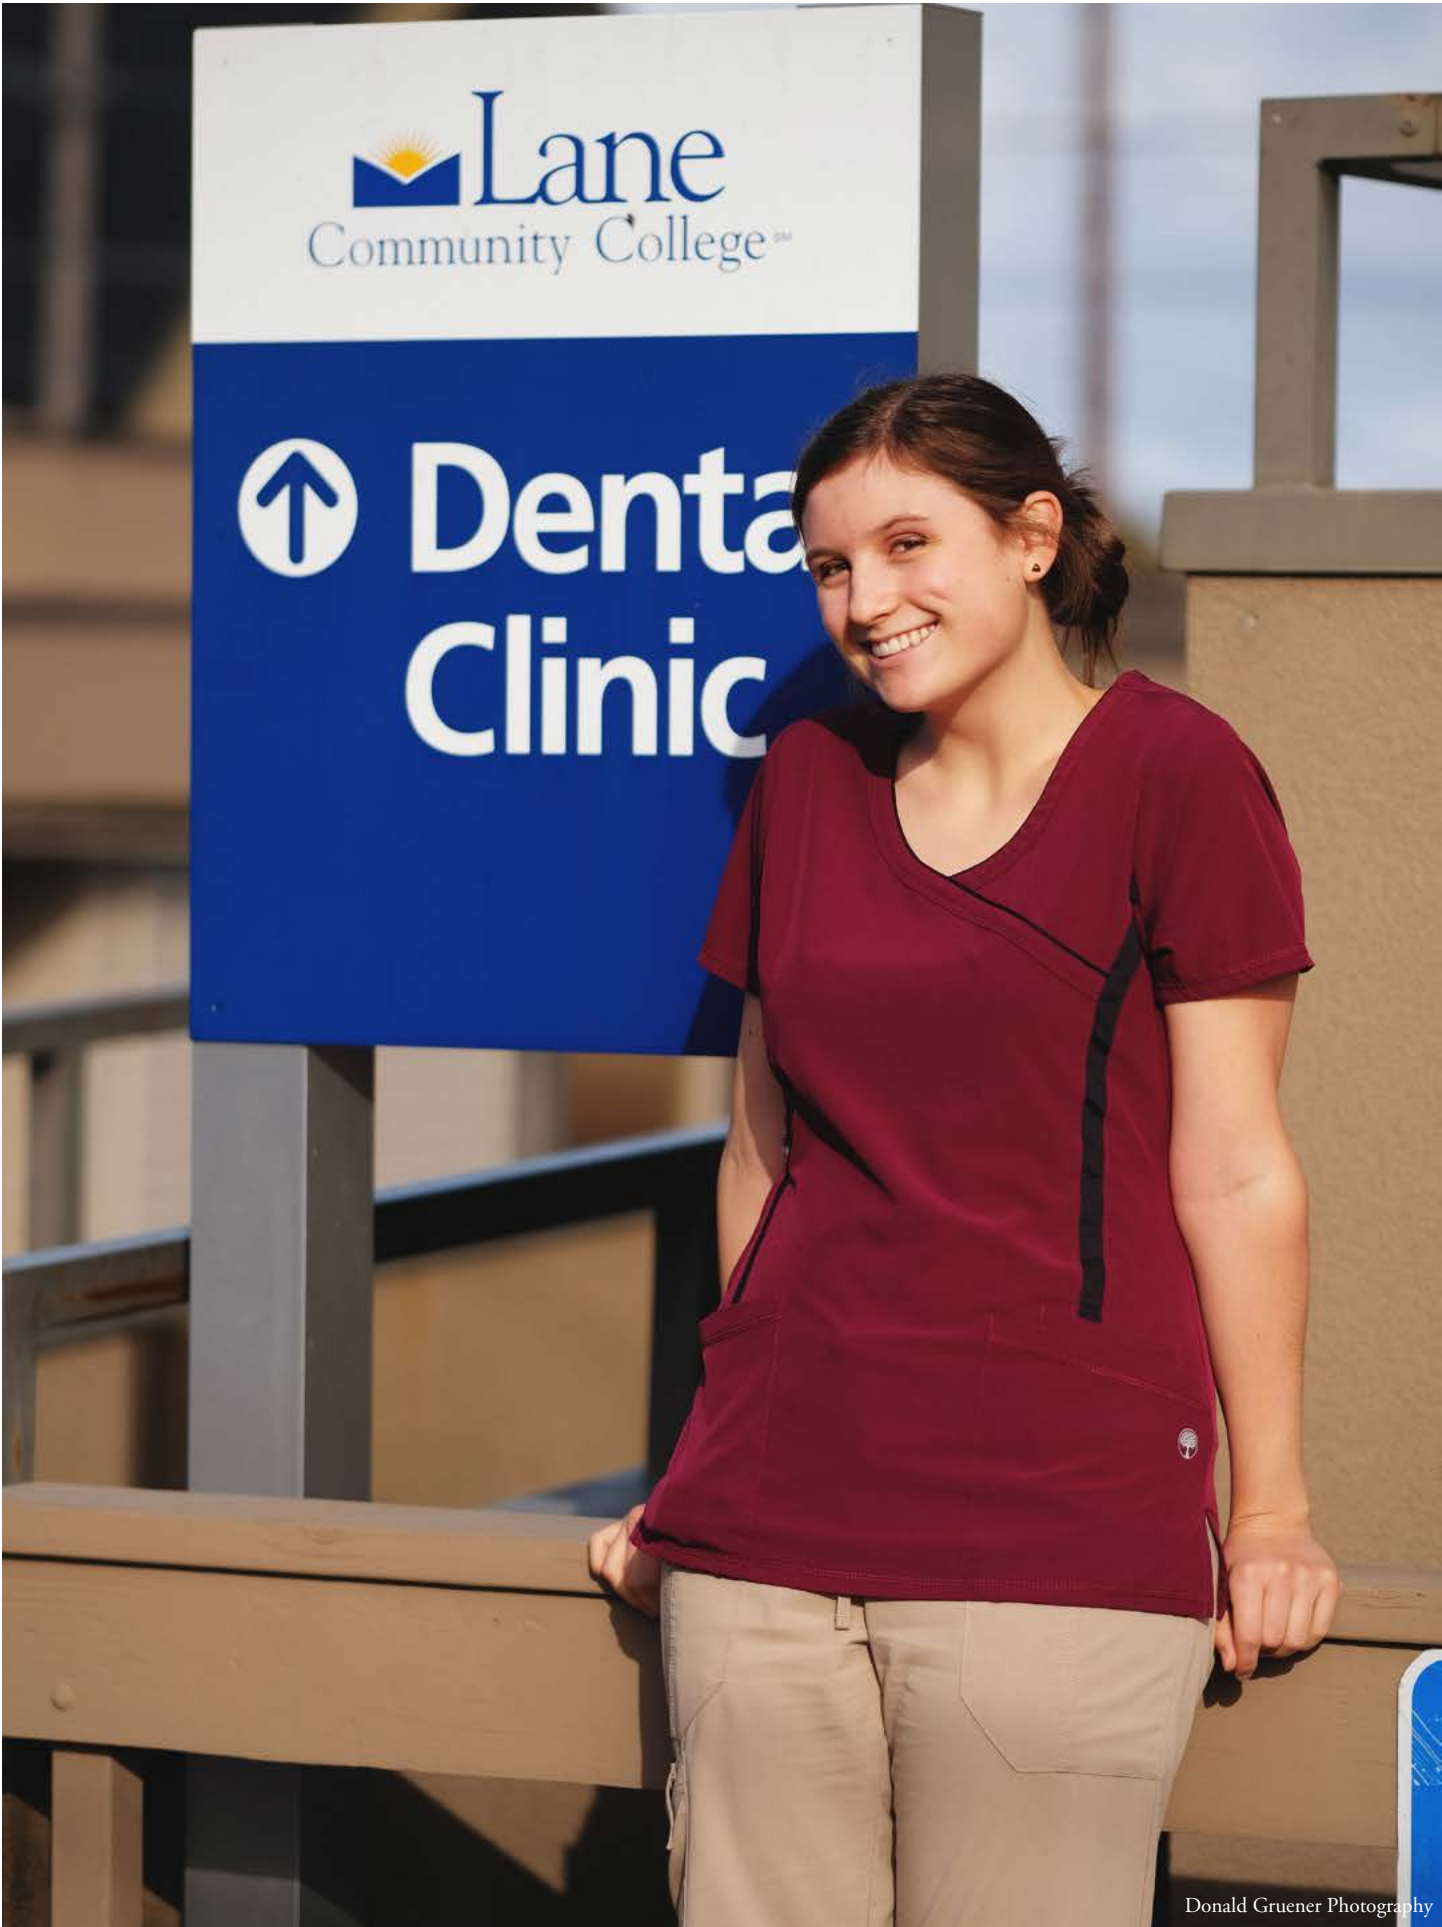

After returning to the States, Sean continued to serve his community by volunteering with the Santa Clara Fire Department, but recently had to put that work on hold. "I needed to focus more on school and entering a new career field, especially for my three children." Sean decided he wanted to return to school and develop a skill set that is in high demand, so he enrolled in LCC's Diesel Technology Program, and he will be the first in his family to graduate from college.

Sean had some experience and training in similar work during his time with the Army, and he is "taking those experiences and turning them into certifications." He has had a wonderful time learning and developing his skillset at LCC and says that "All the instructors I've had have gone above and beyond. You tell them what you need to do, and they put you on the path."

Thanks to LCC Foundation scholarships, Sean has been able to juggle education and supporting his family. "The foundation scholarships allow me to take courses without having to worry about the extra financial burden." Set to graduate this spring, Sean is already working with Rexus Forest Products—he is well on his way to establishing his career.

"All the instructors I've had have gone above and beyond. You tell them what you need to do, and they put you on the path."

Achieving Dreams

ELISE RYAN SCHOLARSHIP RECIPIENT

Elise Ryan knew what she wanted in a career before most high school students start applying for college. Her mother works in a dental office in the small coastal town of Brookings. The promise of stable employment and good pay, along with her extremely positive experiences there, inspired her to pursue a career as a dental hygienist at the age of 14 and she hasn't looked back.

She began looking at colleges with dental hygiene programs when she was just 15, her decision to come to Lane Community College was easy. The professional environment provided by the LCC Dental Clinic made Lane stand out, as did the promise of more hands-on instruction due to the limited admission pool. Yearly class sizes of only twenty students allow instructors to devote extra time to the needs of each student and she was excited about the opportunities this would provide her.

After graduating from high school early with excellent grades, she took advantage of an opportunity to take prerequisite classes for free at Southwestern Oregon Community College. She was committed to moving forward in her studies as soon as possible and was able to complete the necessary courses in just one year, all while working nearly full-time. Elise spent the following year working sixty hours a week at two jobs and saving up money so that she could devote herself fully to Lane's Dental Hygiene program. In 2017, she was admitted to the program. In 2018, she received an LCC Foundation scholarship. Today, she is well on her way to accomplishing her goals.

Lane's Dental Hygiene program requires a high level of commitment from its students, and Elise often finds herself spending twelve-hour days learning new skills and applying that knowledge in the clinic. She says the work she and other students do in the community makes it all worthwhile. "We see people from all walks of life who come in with different attitudes and experiences. You have to understand people, see things from different angles, and try to meet their individual needs." Many of the patients seen at the LCC Dental Clinic come from underserved populations. Elise is committed to providing them with a similarly positive and friendly experience to the one she was afforded growing up.

When she graduates at the end of spring term, Elise plans to stay in the area work in a local dental clinic while she continues her studies to earn a bachelor's degree from OIT in dental hygiene. On track to graduate debt-free, she is an outstanding example of our students who are determined to succeed and give back.

"We see people from all walks of life who come in with different attitudes and experiences. You have to understand people, see things from different angles, and try to meet their individual needs."

We welcome estate gifts and other planned gifts that will be realized after the lifetime of our donors. Planned giving complements your family priorities and there are options for donors at all income levels. These gifts have a large impact on LCC and our students and can involve a variety of assets. Your gift will have a lasting impact beyond your lifetime.

Planned gifts may include bequests and other estate gifts, charitable trusts, charitable annuities, life insurance, or other modes of giving. We work extensively with planned gifts and would be happy to discuss options with you or with your representative.

(We strongly encourage donors to seek independent legal and financial counsel about estate planning.)

For those wishing to designate the LCC Foundation as the beneficiary in a will or other instrument, please reference: Lane Community College Foundation, EIN: 23-7113266

For more information on planned giving, please contact: Tiana Marrone-Creech at (541) 463-5538 or Tiana@laneccfoundation.org

FOUNDATION NEWS

- We passed the $1 million mark! For the first time, the Foundation awarded just over $1 million in scholarships and other financial assistance for Lane students during the 2017-18 school year. Thank you to our wonderful scholarship donors who made this possible!
- In 2018, four new endowments were started by donors, and over 30 endowment donors grew their existing endowments with additional gifts.
- Our annual Harvest Dinner was another incredible success, raising over $350,000 in one evening to support the work of the Foundation, LCC's culinary program, and student scholarships.
- We received two major grants totaling over $300,000 in support of our diversity and equity initiatives from Oregon Community Foundation and Meyer Memorial Trust. These multi-year grants will have a transformative impact on our summer and year-round programs and services for diverse populations at Lane.
- We hosted alumni receptions for our nursing and dental hygiene programs in June – welcoming alumni from the past 50 years back to campus. We look forward to making these annual events.
