Abigail | Transfer Student

An LCC transfer student with an interest in psychology, Abigail has made it her mission to inspire her daughter to strive for success in life. As a single parent, she invests in her goals to make that mission a reality.

WHAT DRIVES ABIGAIL

- Setting an example for her daughter
- Investing in her own future
- Gaining new perspectives on life

Abigail is a transfer student pursuing a major in psychology. This interest comes from her own experiences overcoming challenges and provides a healing and motivating factor in her life.

"I was married when I was a teenager and moved overseas. It was a really big mess. I pretty much shoved everything that I could fit into a suitcase and left with no place to go or anything to my name. I found out I was pregnant shortly after that and just had to figure out how to pull it all together to the best of my ability."

These life changes inspired her to go to college, find stability through education, and take the next steps to achieve her goals.

> " I think it's empowering for me to know that she's watching me go through this. When somebody graduates from college, does all the right things — then that's just their reality."

Why College?

Abigail knows that the children of college graduates are more apt to be successful. She wants to be an example of how much education can change your situation.

"I don't want my daughter to grow up and think that college is just not a choice — that it's just not in your tax bracket. I know that she's going to get to experience the change that comes with an education. It's really powerful to me and inspiring to know that she'll get to watch my hard work turn into some actual physical results."

> " My life experience has opened my eyes to the importance of grabbing on to potential and riding it instead of just knowing it's there."
